ISLAND SKY SIGNS DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT FOR AUSTRALIAN MARKET, IMMEDIATE PRODUCT SHIPMENTS PLANNED FOR MELBOURNE

Island Sky® Australia Limited (ASX:ISK) has announced that its unique, "air to water" making machines would soon be available in Australia, after signing a distribution agreement with the Waternauts LLP.

Under the agreement, Island Sky® Chief Executive Officer Richard Groden, said the company would ship two container-loads of its Skywater™ machines to Australia, in late January, under a consignment arrangement with Waternauts.

Waternauts current business is focused on water-filtration products. Its head office is in Victoria and has agencies in Tasmania, Darwin, Katherine, Tennant Creek, Alice Springs, Kalgoorlie, Mt Isa and Emerald, servicing 80 other towns Australia-wide.

"The distribution agreement with Waternauts gives Island Sky a strong, strategic partner in Australia, allowing us to introduce our Skywater™ machines to the local market," Mr Groden said.

"With support from Waternauts, the applications for our Skywater™ machines range from supplying drinking water to homes, offices, and factories, to producing much larger amounts of water required for infrastructure projects right across the country."

Mr Groden said the consignment shipped to Waternauts would comprise 120 of the floor-standing Skywater™ 14 machines and 8 of the larger, commercial Skywater™ 300 machines.

A Skywater™ 300 machine is currently on display at a site outside of Melbourne, with two other demonstrations being planned for NSW and Queensland in 2010.

"Our recent marketing and media activities have generated strong interest in our Skywater™ machines from the Australian mining industry," Mr Groden explained.

"In fact, Island Sky® is currently in discussions to commence pilot programs of our larger Skywater™ 300 machines in mining sites in NSW and Queensland, where our product is being viewed as a cost-effective alternative to trucking in water supplies."
